Biography

Patty Block teaches women business owners who are experts in their fields how to turn up their power to price, sell and run their business on their own terms.

This means fine-tuning their operations and scaling their revenue for strategic growth.

As their trusted advisor, she brings a unique perspective, having experienced and solved many of the same complex issues women face, as leaders, moms, daughters and sisters.

Forming a partnership of unbiased accountability, she helps women position their companies--financially, operationally, technologically--for game-changing results.

Patty raised three fantastic kids, all of whom are business owners and also work in Patty's company (she essentially raised her own workforce!)

About Patty

Growing up, my mom made these fabulous cookies. The whole house smelled good, the cookies were warm and gooey - I mean these were seriously good cookies - and my entire life, I watched my mom eat the broken cookies.

It wasn't until I was a teenager that I finally thought to ask, "Mom, why do you only eat the broken cookies? Do they taste better?" She just laughed and said, "No, I eat the broken cookies so you can have the whole ones!"

Not too long ago, I came across a shocking statistic: 62% of women rely on their businesses for their primary income, yet 88% of these businesses generate less than $100,000 in annual revenue. That's when it hit me and that image of my mom eating the broken cookies popped in my head: that's what we, as women, are doing in our businesses! We eat the broken cookies and everyone else - our clients, our staff, our families - gets the whole cookie.

The Broken Cookie Effect™ is what I call this false belief that we can't serve others and make a lot of money - somehow that you can't do both.

Since 2006, I have worked with women business owners who are experts in their fields, empowering them to generate more revenue with less stress, and work smarter, not harder.
